

Liberal Arts

The Navitas at UMass Boston program offers an alternative pathway to the University of Massachusetts Boston for international students who may not qualify for direct entry and who seek a supportive study environment.

The Navitas UPP is equivalent to the first year of a UMass Boston bachelor's degree program. When you successfully complete Year 1 with Navitas you can move directly into the second year of your undergraduate degree.

All students entering the program are fully matriculated UMass Boston students from day one with Navitas.

Political Science

- The Department of Political Science offers a variety of course options in the study of politics to prepare students for both professional success and informed, engaged citizenship in our increasingly globalized world. The department's course offerings are organized into:
 - Major and Minor in Political Science
 - Minor in International Relations
 - Minor in Public Policy
- The major and minor in Political Science offers the opportunity to explore many different dimensions of political life, ranging from small groups and citizens' organizations, to cities, individual nations, and global systems.
- The study of politics includes not only basic information about government and political process, but also explores broad issues of power, conflict, peace, citizenship, representation, and justice.
- An internship related to Politics, Government or Public Service, can earn up to 9 credits towards your major and provide valuable international work experience for your resume!
- Take exciting courses such as 'Government and Politics of the United States,' and 'Massachusetts Politics,'- take the theories you learned in the classroom and apply them directly to an internship at one of the many global and political organizations in Boston.

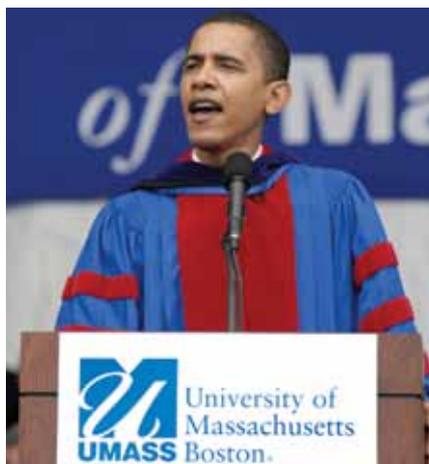

What careers can you pursue with a degree in Political Science?

- Federal, state and local governments
